Paul's Third Missionary Journey

The map illustrates Paul's third missionary journey, starting from Antioch in Syria and moving westward through Cilicia, Galatia, and Asia (modern-day Turkey). It then shows his route to Macedonia and Greece. Key locations marked include Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, Derbe, Ephesus, Corinth, and Athens. The map also shows the Roman provinces of Macedonia, Thracia, Bithynia and Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Cilicia, Commagene, Syria, Nabatea, Judea, and Paphlagonia. A legend indicates that red dots represent cities, yellow dots represent one of the 'Seven Churches' (Rev. 2-3), and a red line represents Paul's route. A scale bar shows 200 miles and 300 kilometers. A small inset map in the top right corner shows the location of the journey within the broader context of the Eastern Mediterranean.

In the same way, you can find facts about people, such as “Paul”, and things, such as “gold”.
